Prioritise what really counts to get peace of mind

The words 'data protection' are causing fear, doubt and uncertainty in boardrooms everywhere. How will the GDPR and the Data Protection Act 2018 play out? What do we still need to do? With expertise from Bytes, you can get peace of mind - fast.

New laws, new risks

Since the enactment in law of GDPR in May 2018, data protection has risen up the corporate agenda. But reading the regulations can be a tough challenge. Without any case law there is no baseline for understanding the full implications for businesses.

Focus on what counts

Bytes helps you to identify where you are today with data privacy and how to concentrate on what's most important. We take a consulting-led approach that focuses on the top 12 requirements set out by the Information Commissioner's Office (ICO) - from awareness to protection by design.

Cost-effective data protection

Our team will look at your data handling processes, we'll spot any gaps and issues, and then carry out remediation. This allows you to be more focused and spend money more wisely within your organisation to protect both internal data as well as information belonging to customers.

We can provide a raft of expert services that meet data privacy requirements and raise the general security of your environment. These can range from data discovery and assurance testing, through to incident response services, training and the provision of a virtual data protection officer.
